The maximum weighted average maturity of the securities in the fund's portfolio will not exceed 60 days. The weighted average life of the fund's portfolio will be limited to 120 days or less. The types of debt securities in which the fund may invest, but is not limited to, include transferable securities listed or traded on regulated markets such as commercial paper & notes, repurchase agreements, variable rate instruments, and bank instruments, as well as shares of other short-term money market funds. The Central Bank has authorised the fund to invest up to 100% of its assets in US Government Agency Securities and US Treasury Securities on the basis that such securities will be comprised of at least six different issues and any one issue will not account for more than 30% of the net assets of the fund. The securities in which the fund invests are restricted to securities which have a residual maturity until the legal redemption date of less than or equal to 397 days.

Investment manager's report

In December, the Federal Reserve loosened the reins of its galloping monetary policy but did not signal an imminent return trip. Based on still-accelerating inflation in September and October, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) pressed forward with its fourth 75 basis-point hike of the fed funds range at its early November meeting. But as inflation data softened in November, the committee opted to raise rates by 50 basis points at its mid-December meeting, setting the new range at 4.25-4.50%. The markets responded enthusiastically to both the new inflation figures, predicting the aggressive campaign was drawing to an end. Chair Jerome Powell pushed back at this notion in his post-meeting press conference, emphasizing the central bank is determined not just to restore price stability but also prevent a rebound similar to what happened in the 1970s, when many now think policy-makers stopped their anti-inflation campaign too soon. The Summary of Economic Projections (SEP) released in December indicated other Fed officials agreed with the tightening policy. No less than 17 of 19 FOMC participants expected the target rate to be in a range of at least 5-5.25% at the end of 2023-and most thought a sharp economic slowdown, if not an outright recession, will be needed to pull inflation down to their preferred 2% level. They predicted that the robust labor market will finally roll over in 2023, with unemployment rate reaching 4.6%.

At the end of December, yields on 1-, 3-, 6- and 12-month U.S. Treasuries were 4%, 4.42%, 4.70% and 4.70%, respectively; the 1-, 3-, 6- and 12-month Bloomberg Short-Term Bank Yield Index rates (BSBY) were 4.36%, 4.62%, 5.01% and 5.43%, respectively; and the 1-, 3-, 6- and 12-month London interbank offered rates were 4.39%, 4.77%, 5.14% and 5.48%, respectively.
