Thomas Banks, CFA
Portfolio Manager

"IPOs have always been part of our process. We selectively participate in offerings that meet our key investment criteria and that we believe offer our shareholders a way to gain exposure to companies that are still in the early stages of growth. Some of our top-performing holdings over the last few years have been companies that we initially invested in during their IPO, and we will continue to look out for promising opportunities in the non-U.S. IPO pipeline for our shareholders."

Investing in IPOs involves special risks such as limited liquidity and increased volatility.

Portfolio holdings are subject to change. Portfolio composition percentages are based on net assets at the close of business on the date indicated and may not necessarily reflect adjustments that are routinely made when presenting net assets for formal financial statement purposes. Because this a managed portfolio, the investment mix will change.

Mutual funds are subject to risks and fluctuate in value.

International investing involves special risks including currency risk, increased volatility, political risks and differences in auditing and other financial standards.

The fund may invest in small capitalization (or "smallcap") companies. Small-cap companies may have less liquid stock, a more volatile share price, unproven track records, a limited product or service base and limited access to capital. The above factors could make small-cap companies more likely to fail than larger companies and increase the volatility of the fund's portfolio, performance and share price. Suitable securities of small-cap companies also can have limited availability and cause capacity constraints on investment strategies for funds that invest in them.
